Opening 1 / 7

Good evening, everyone. I'm Frankie, Leo's big sister, and yes, the program says best woman. Leo said he wanted the person who has known him longest and teased him most. I have been training for this since the day he was born.

Part 2 2 / 7

When Leo was in eighth grade, he had his first school dance, and he asked me to teach him to slow dance. I was sixteen and had exactly one move. We practiced in the garage, to the radio, with him standing on a milk crate so he would not step on my feet. He still stepped on my feet. He managed it from on top of the crate.

Part 3 3 / 7

At the dance, he did fine. He told me afterward that he counted to four under his breath the whole time, the way I showed him. His date asked if he was doing math. He said yes.

Part 4 4 / 7

Here is what I didn't tell him then. I watched him in that garage, sweating and counting and apologizing to my shoes, and I thought, this kid is going to be a wonderful partner someday. He tries so hard to get it right for the other person.

Part 5 5 / 7

Marguerite, I was right. I have watched the two of you dance at three weddings now, and he has not stepped on your feet once. I asked him how. He said, 'She leads when I lose count.' It is the best thing I have ever heard him say, and I have heard him say a lot of things.

Part 6 6 / 7

So here is what your best woman wishes you. Keep counting to four when you need to. Let each other lead when one of you loses count. And Leo, leave the milk crate at home. You don't need it anymore.

Closing 7 / 7

Everyone, raise your glasses to Leo and Marguerite, and to their first dance tonight. Cheers.
