Opening 1 / 5

Thank you all for being here. My name is Glenn, and I'm Lily's father. I'll keep this short, because Lily asked me to, and because after twenty-nine years I have finally learned to listen to her.

Part 2 2 / 5

Lily grew up in two kitchens, her mother's and mine. Hers had the good cookies. Mine had the good pancakes. Lily figured out early that she could get both on the same Saturday if she planned it right, and she usually did.

Part 3 3 / 5

I want to thank Lily's mother, Joanne. We did not stay married, but we never stopped raising Lily together. Joanne drove to every game I couldn't make, sent me the photos, and made sure Lily always knew both kitchens were home. Joanne, thank you. Our daughter is who she is tonight in large part because of you.

Part 4 4 / 5

Marco, welcome. You have two kitchens to choose from now, and a seat waiting in both.

Please raise your glasses to Lily and Marco. May your home always feel like the best of both. Cheers.
