Opening 1 / 4

Hello, everyone, and welcome. I'm Frank, Lucy's dad. Lucy asked me to keep this under three minutes, and she handed me a timer, which tells you how much faith she has in me. I'll do my best. Please start the clock.

Part 2 2 / 4

On Lucy's first day of kindergarten, I walked her to the door. She was five, with a backpack the size of a suitcase. She marched right in without a glance back. I was the one who stood at the fence for twenty minutes, waving at a closed door. Finally a teacher came out and said, sir, she's fine. I said, I know. I was talking about me. I'm told I was fine by Thursday.

Part 3 3 / 4

Years later, when Lucy brought Avery to meet us, I swore I'd be cool. I wore my good sweater. I rehearsed three questions. Avery arrived, said hello, asked about my model trains, and listened to the answer, all eleven minutes of it. Nobody has ever done that. I decided on the spot that Avery could stay.

Closing 4 / 4

Avery, you keep Lucy laughing, which is the best job in the world, and you've been very patient with this family. Lucy, you were a brave kid at that door, and you're a braver adult today. I'm proud of you both. Please raise your glasses to Lucy and Avery.
