Opening 1 / 5

Hello, everyone. I'm Bridget, and Ana and I work at the same clinic, three desks apart. I'll be brief, since Ana has a rule about long meetings.

Part 2 2 / 5

On my first day, the copier jammed with my only copy of the schedule inside. I was ready to quit before lunch. Ana walked over, opened three little doors I did not know it had, and pulled out the paper without a single tear. Then she put a mint on my desk and said, 'Everyone's first day is the copier.'

Part 3 3 / 5

That was five years ago. Since then, Ana has been my lunch partner, my carpool, and the person who tells me when my email sounds angry.

Part 4 4 / 5

Omar, you know how she is. She opens the little doors that nobody else can find. Please let her, and keep a mint in your pocket for her.

Everyone, please raise a glass to Ana and Omar. May all your doors open, and may your papers never jam.