Opening 1 / 7

Hi, everyone. I'm Esther, Tilly's sister. Before I begin, a quick word to my husband Gus, who is sitting at table four. Gus, you are Tilly's favorite brother-in-law. You are also her only brother-in-law, so the competition was light.

Part 2 2 / 7

Gus joined our family on a Friday, which in our house means charades. He had never played. Tilly was on his team. She looked at the first card, which was 'a penguin in a rainstorm,' and acted it out for ninety seconds with great passion. Gus said, 'Is it a hard day at work?'

Part 3 3 / 7

That is how Tilly plays. She goes all in, she does not hold back, and she believes that if she tries hard enough, you will understand. Usually you do. Gus got the next one, a dancing lighthouse, in four seconds. That is what happens when someone loves you. You start to understand the penguin.

Part 4 4 / 7

Priya, the first time you came to charades, you got the penguin on the first try. Gus looked at me across the room, and I looked at him. We both knew right then. You were already one of us.

Part 5 5 / 7

So here is a short guide for the newest member of the family, who is Priya. Rule one: Tilly's acting is always correct, even when it is wrong. Rule two: never ask if it is a hard day at work. Rule three: bring snacks.

Part 6 6 / 7

Tilly, you were the first person to teach me that a family is a team, and that sometimes the team is wrong, and you keep playing. I love you. Priya, we are so glad you picked this team.

Closing 7 / 7

Everyone, please raise your glass to Tilly and Priya. May every card you draw be easy, and may every game end in a tie.
